Why have a standard?

"Our appearance is a powerful communication tool, sending messages to every sighted person. Everyone is highly influenced by the visual impression of a person they are meeting for the first time." Catherine Bell

What is business casual?

Business casual simply means dressing "professionally," but comfortably. Clothing should be comfortable, but not something you would wear to lounge around in at home.

Do's and Don'ts

Sweats and denim (any color) would be out, but khakis and slacks could be considered appropriate in most work environments.

Shoes

Also, opened toed shoes, sandals, and casual shoes are usually not considered appropriate in business simply for safety reasons.

No, no's . . .

In business casual dress it is easy to be "too" casual. Anything that is denim blue, sheer, revealing, too baggy, too tight, or having that "worn" look would be considered inappropriate.

A simple rule

Business casual does not mean wearing the latest trendy fashion. Save the trends for your friends, not your coworkers.

Jackets

While jackets are fine for cold weather, they are frowned upon by the business world as daily business attire. While some coverings are appropriate (suits, blazers, cardigans, vests) some are not (sweatshirts, hoodies, ponchos, windbreakers).

Putting the Look Together

Sometimes the trick to achieving a good "business casual" look is to pair something dressy with something a bit less professional. Business casual does not necessarily mean suits and ties—but it can for some companies.

Confused?

There are three key elements to dressing in a business casual style. Remember the following and you should be within most policy guidelines:

- Be modest
- Don't draw attention to yourself
- Be safety conscious

Things Change

Many companies today have set aside Fridays as a day to wear business casual. Other companies have moved to a business casual dress code overall. Keep in mind fashions and policies change. It is your job to stay current on what your company requires.

- Evaluate yourself—points will be deducted if you do not.
- Choose a teacher to evaluate you.
- Make sure the teacher signs after grading.
- Check to see all items have been scored.
- Total your score and the teacher's score.
- Return the Rubric to your last hour teacher.

Change . . .

... is normal. Fashions will change, safety requirements will change, state and national laws regulating industry fields will change, and individual employee policies will change. You are being trained how to follow a set of guidelines. What MTCHS requires may not be a policy in ALL of industry, but it is the policy at MTCHS—a guideline.
